Dear students at LMU’s Faculty of Geosciences,

The difficult circumstances during the Corona crisis put a particular strain on student life. Even though the first steps into the digital summer semester seem to be successful, thanks to the efforts of many and the patience of everyone, we are also aware that some of you are facing considerable difficulties in participating in digital teaching. In order to help quickly and as un-bureaucratically as possible with special problems, LMU has quickly launched the LMU Emergency Grant.

The aim of this scholarship is to support students in need so that the smoothest possible access to the courses and courses offered online is ensured, for example through the procurement of necessary technical equipment and / or the improvement of Internet connections. The scholarship can only be used for the procurement or improvement of such technical equipment. A total of 500 grants of € 500 each are made available now.

A total of 15 of these emergency grants are available for the Faculty of Geosciences. Students at our faculty (master’s courses, bachelor’s courses (main subject only) and teacher students with geography as a subject) are hereby invited to apply for the LMU Emergency Grant. The selection process takes place in close consultation with the Dean, the Deans of Studies, the course coordinators and the faculties’ student councils.

In order to be able to allocate the grants quickly, we must keep a tight schedule. Please consider the following information carefully; late or incomplete applications won’t be considered (without exception):

Application via email to: dekanat@geo.uni-muenchen.de (only via your campus email address)
Subject line: LMU-Notstipendium - [your matriculation number]
Personal details: name, matriculation number, degree program, semester
Content: What specific technical problems are hindering you in participating to the digital teaching program? (answer max. 500 characters)
Why can’t you solve these technical problems yourself? (answer max. 500 characters)
How would you like to use the LMU emergency grant to solve the technical problems? (answer max. 500 characters)

Application deadline: Tuesday, April 28th, 2020, 11 a.m. (CEST)

The students selected for the LMU emergency scholarship at the Faculty of Geosciences will be notified by email no later than April 29, 2020 at 12 p.m. (only to the campus email address) and informed about the steps to follow. Please note that selected students can of course only be provided with the LMU Emergency Grant at one of LMU’s faculties.

Sincerely yours,
Prof. Dr. Ralf Ludwig
Dean
Faculty of Geosciences
